Playing for a cause

For the last six years, a group of generous hockey players have organized a pick-up game that raises money for the Head Injury Association of Fort Erie (HIAFE) which brings in about $400 each time. On Thursday night, Will Denham, left, faces off against Charlie Blair after the opening faceoff is dropped by referee Chris Merrylees. The HIAFE is also hoping the community will show interest in a raffle it is having for a full day at the World Junior Championships being held this year in Buffalo. The prize up for grabs includes three games on Dec. 31. Call the HIAFE at (905) 871-7789 for more information.

Local woman waits 55 minutes for ambulance, EMS deputy chief says incident is getting attention

Kris Dubé
The Times

On Aug. 25 Tracy Rolston was driving into the Bridgeburg Area along Central Avenue, when she noticed a man take a spill on his bicycle.

At the corner of Wintermute Street and Central Avenue, she pulled her vehicle to the shoulder of the road and asked him if he needed help.

He replied that he did and would be appreciative of her calling 9-1-1 for him, explaining he had just been involved in a physical dispute.

Ten minutes after she called Niagara Emergency Medical Services (EMS), she called back again because the man had slipped out of consciousness.

Megan Louws, left, and her friend Makenna Russell recently donated some of their hair to Angel Hair for Kids after a trim at the Cutting Edge on Garrison Road. They made the generous donation, in memory of Megan's mother Jenna Louws, who passed away from cancer in January. Jenna's motto on life was always, "live, love, laugh" according to her friends.

Public safety always the biggest concern

Twenty minutes after the second phone call, she saw an ambulance pull into the parking lot of the Fort Erie Railway Museum, in sight of where she stood over the unconscious man, keeping him covered from the pouring rain.

She phoned 9-1-1 again and asked why the ambulance wasn't approaching the scene and it was explained to her that paramedics must wait for police to arrive, before providing aid to someone with injuries from a violent incident.

To summarize, she had waited about 55 minutes before the Niagara Regional Police arrived.

Kevin Smith, Niagara EMS deputy chief, said this is a policy that has been in place over a long period of time but is also part of a review process that has been taking place recently. He said this situation endured by Rolston gives even more reason to continue reviewing rules and regulations.

"Certainly, this incident caught our attention," said Smith.

He continued by saying that paramedics can often find themselves in the middle of dangerous predicaments and this policy is there to protect them.

"We also have to be mindful of our paramedics' safety... they respond to all types of situations," said Smith.

Niagara Regional Police district no. 5 staff sergeant Dave Hunter said he appreciated the amount of time it took for police to respond to the call is the result of it occurring right in the middle of a shift

When it comes to responding to emergency situations, we always have to be able to look at our policies and find out how we can best serve the public."

— Staff Sgt. Dave Hunter

change and when officers were already on scene somewhere else.

"Our guys were busy responding to other situations," he said.

He doesn't disagree that this incident is grounds for policies being given a second examination, since the safety of the public is the first priority of the police.

"When it comes to responding to emergency situations, we always have to be able to look at our policies and find out how we can best serve the public," said Hunter.

Every hour of the day there are five patrol cruisers on the job and one supervisor in Fort Erie, added Hunter.

Man facing fraud charges

A Fort Erie man faces charges after police investigated a fraud complaint at TIM-BR Mart in Welland.

Niagara Regional Police say two men entered the store Monday and more than $3,500 in lumber was purchased using a credit card.

An employee became suspicious of the transaction and contacted the credit card company and was notified the transaction was not a legitimate purchase.

The alert employee was able to jot down the licence plate number of the vehicle as it left the store.

The lumber was later discovered at a storage unit on Spears Road.

Charged with possession of property obtained by crime is a 43-year-old male.

The second male has not been identified at this time and police continue to investigate.

Vehicle no longer suspicious

A warning issued by police about an incident in Crescent Park is no longer a concern.

On Saturday, NRP were called to an address on Daytona Drive in response to a suspicious vehicle. Police spoke to the homeowners, who claim their two young children were approached by a female, described as being 30 to 40 years of age with long streaked brown hair, wearing glasses. The woman asked the children if they would help her locate her missing cat.

The children ignored her request and went home to tell their parents.

On Sunday, a similar incident took place in Port

Colborne and police investigated whether both incidents were related in some way.

On Tuesday, the NRP issued a press release saying it has been concluded that both incidents are not suspicious in nature and that the woman in Crescent Park was a resident who was simply looking for her missing cat.

Ridgeway woman faces charges after drug raid

A 20-year-old Ridgeway woman is being charged with possession and sale of a controlled substance for the purpose of trafficking after a residence in Welland was raided by Niagara Regional Police on Sept. 10. Officers located approximately $1,800 worth of cocaine and prescription pills, along with other items used in the sale of controlled substances. The 20-year-old woman, along with a 45-year-old male, and 45-year-old male, both from Welland, are facing charges.

Accessible Italo-Club

Last Thursday, dignitaries such as Ward 1 Coun. Sandy Annunziata and Niagara Falls-Fort Erie MPP Kim Craitor joined members of the Italo-Canadian Club and other residents to officially open the club's wheelchair accessible entrances. The project was funded by $50,000 from the Ontario Trillium Foundation.

APPLES AND ORANGES

If you are among the growing number of hearing-impaired individuals who could derive benefit from a hearing instrument, you may be wondering about these devices and their capabilities. Those who rejected the use of a hearing instrument in the past may be surprised to learn that there is a whole new technology. While older-style "analog" hearing instruments could not distinguish between sounds (and amplitudes of sounds) clearly, newer digital instruments are much more discriminating. Instead of being fed sounds that are too loud or difficult to hear, listeners with digital hearing instruments are fed sounds that are balanced to the wearer's hearing ability. The sound quality of the newer instruments is impressive.

Today's more sophisticated and technologically advanced than ever before, today's hearing instruments still keep one simple goal in mind—helping the hearing impaired better by making the sounds of the world more comfortable, and more available, but those benefits are getting bigger and more advanced every day. Celebrating 20 years at Casa El Norte

Shelter continues to provide opportunity for new people coming to Canada

Marc MacDonald
The Times

Twenty years ago Casa El Norte opened its doors and hasn't looked back since - unless you count the 20th anniversary get together they had last weekend to celebrate where they have come from.

Lynn Hannigan, the director at Casa El Norte says that over the 20 years she has seen many changes, but the overall result is still the same - refugees find their way to 281 Central Avenue.

"Things have changed many times over the 20 years - different policies, procedures, governments. It changes frequently," said Hannigan. "Most come through the United States, have an appointment at the border with immigration to see if they are eligible to enter the country and for the most part have been here in the country already. If they don't have a place to go, we get the call."

Many of those people who crossed the border and at one time stayed at Casa El Norte returned on Sept. 12 for the celebration, as Hannigan estimates having at least 300 people show up. "It was great, we put the word out as much as we could and we anticipated as many as 300 people and we got at least 300 people," said Hannigan.

"People from 20 years ago came from, from the Kitchener area."

Included in the celebration was Horacio Lopez and his family - current residents - who thoroughly enjoyed the day's events.

"We enjoyed it a lot, it was a surprise, seeing that many people," said Lopez. "We saw people who were former residents and people from the home, we were so impressed and we liked it a lot."

Lopez and his family, originally from Colombia, came to Canada due to security issues in their home country. With a cousin in Mississippi, he and his wife came to Canada to find a home there before making their way to Fort Erie.

While adjusting to life in Canada is still a process for Lopez and his family, he has tried to relay to his children just how lucky they are to have the experience they are living.

"I tell them that being in the shelter is an opportunity that not too many kids have in their whole life," he said. "They get to meet people from all around the world with all kinds of differences, situations, ways of thinking, food, everything is different."

Aside from the variety of cultures that are found within the house, Lopez and his family have had to get used to not only the culture of the

We have learned a lot and we are so grateful for everything we have received.”

— Horacio Lopez

country, but the seasons as well, something he says they are adapting to.

"We have learned a lot and we are so grateful for everything we have received," he said. "We are starting to get used to the seasons and the winter and everything."

As of Sept. 16 Casa El Norte was housing seven people, with four more coming by the end of the day, continuing to provide a home and support for those who enter Canada as refugees.

With years behind them already, it would appear that the next 20 will be just as rewarding.

Bridgeburg secondary plan approved

The Town of Fort Erie is moving ahead with its Bridgeburg Secondary Plan.

On Sept. 15, local residents approved a staff report that summarizes plans for the oldest neighbourhood in town, before official plan and zoning by-law amendments were approved this past Monday.

By adopting the secondary plan, the Town is now able to implement proposed land use changes that are part of the Bridgeburg

Neighbourhood Plan approved in late 2008.

The neighbourhood plan is expected to provide many improvements to the area, including revitalization of the former Horton Steel property on Central Avenue, streetscaping work on Jarvis Street, a new more attractive Concession Avenue bridge and a new use for the Coal Docks property.

The plan also includes the extension of Concession Road to allow better access to the downtown core from the Queen Elizabeth Way.

YouTube video is pointless and immature

During election time, there will always be attempts to damage the character of candidates.

This week, a video surfaced on the popular website YouTube of mayor Doug Martin speaking about local health care issues to a woman who was posing as someone interested in moving here to Fort Erie.

What he didn't know, was that this woman was recording their meeting with a hidden video camera.

This was likely an effort orchestrated by someone who doesn't care for some of Martin's decisions and in our opinion is a show act.

If there is something you don't agree with, argue it openly. If you feel a member of council is responsible for, use the proper channels to explain your stance.

Write a letter to the editor, make a delegation at a council meeting...don't send someone to the mayor's office, or anyone's office for that matter to dig for secrets and conspiracies.

There is no proof that this video is connected to anyone running for office in the upcoming election, but if that is that is the case... they should be ashamed of themselves for being so unprofessional.

What did the video show? Why was it even posted? Martin doesn't say anything about what he hasn't said in a public forum, so it is unclear to us at the Times why it has come to our attention and other Internet users.

The objective of the video was likely to make Martin look bad, but in fact it is the total opposite.

There is a big difference between intelligence, political tactics and simple immaturity.

There is one word that comes to mind about this video... silly.

-Kris Dubé

Do You Remember?

Thanks to the magic of the internet we have heard from 2 of the three people in last week's photo who no longer live in the area. David Redekop and Jim Smith wrote to us to identify, L-R: Dave Redekop, Jennifer Heckman, and Jim Smith.

As well, Jennifer's brother and sister-in-law Bob and Charlene Heckman phoned in.

The consensus is that the photo was taken as part of the grade 12 or 13 graduation exercises at Fort Erie Secondary in 1980 or 1981.

They modestly suggest the reason for the photo being "maybe we had received some recognition for an academic award". Neither of the gentlemen could believe that 30 years have flown by.

This week's photo appears to be the presentation of a golf trophy. Two names appear on the back, Allen Kemir and George Wright.

If you can shed some light on this photo please call the Museum at (905) 894-5322 or you can send an email to museum@forterie.on.ca.

Reporter learning more about our town everyday

Mac MacDonald
Reporter's Notebook

Prior to being hired on here at the Times I could have counted on one hand the number of visits I had made to Fort Erie.

The reason for such a lack of travel down the QEW from my native St.

Catharines eludes me, and in reality, might not even exist - it just wasn't a place that my day-to-day life led me to.

When free time permitted I would scour the Internet (OK, the Times Facebook page) to try and do some research on the publication and the city I had become a part of.

During this particular personal mission I came across a post that struck a familiar chord; a mindset that seems to have echoed in every town I have lived in thus far.

Without repeating said comment, we'll just say that it was negative in nature and didn't paint a very pretty picture of the town.

While I have no qualms with the perspective of the person who posted the comment as they are just as entitled to their opinion as I am to mine that disagrees with it, I'd like to remind them, and everyone else that Fort Erie is a place to be proud of.

You may already feel that way, but just in case you don't, you should know that the grass isn't always greener, despite the ever-so-popular belief that it most certainly is.

In my short time here so far I've met Barb Volake of COPE who provides an invaluable service for those who are in need of the food bank.

But the list doesn't end

there - this is I am sure of.

Volake takes jobs at your hometown and point out the flaws to newcomers when they arrive, we've likely all done it.

But at some point there needs to be a connection, a binding attitude that says "I'm proud of this town. It may not be perfect but take a look around, look at the people we have here and what they're doing".

I don't expect a flurry of pride to be born within the souls of residents here in Fort Erie based on the fact you've just read, but the next time you default to the negative, think for a quick second of the people who are doing their best to debunk the notion that your community isn't worth your praise.

Noyes responds to recent letter

Dear Editor,

Recently a editorial was submitted regarding wayfinding signage. The information included in the editorial was incorrect and the author appears to have been misinformed. The costs for the signs themselves was supported, but the $63,000 for a consultant for design and engineering services was defeated by the majority of council.

I, as did the majority of council, had confidence that the Business Improvement Areas (BIA), Town staff, Chamber of Commerce and the Economic Development and Tourism Corporation (EDTC) were quite capable to decide on design and location for the much needed signs. Most sign manufacturers, when asked, will work with you closely showing you various design options and can customize to as per your preference. Surely we know our town better than a consultant regarding sign placement.

This town spends a great deal of money on consultants to give us information we already, or should know. We need to review our use of high paid consultants and save taxpayer dollars.

The taxes are going up every year, in the past four budgets the increase in the general tax levy is over 30 per cent. Yet this includes new growth, but over 30 per cent!

A report regarding wayfinding signage is coming back to council and hopefully it does not recommend that money ($63,000) be spent on consultant fees, something I still will not support.

The loss of commercial and retail activity in all our downtown cores is a major concern, we need to focus on how best to support our downtowns during these tough economic times.

As the October 25 election draws near, many editorials will be written whether for or against a particular individual. I encourage everyone to do their best to separate fact from fiction.

Town to budget for algae problem

Kris Dubé
The Times

Even though the summer is slowly slipping away, local councilors and town staff are discussing a plan to clean up local beaches.

At Monday night's regular council meeting, Ward 6 Coun. Annmarie Noyes brought forward a motion to request that town staff prepare a report to address the problem of algae accumulation at Waverly Beach.

On Aug. 7 and 14 the Fort Erie Rotary Club, along with a group of other volunteers took it upon themselves to remove 40 tons of algae at the local beach and the local councillor says she is told by people who live in the area that this summer was the worst ever seen at the particular piece of shoreline property.

"If we can look at preventing this from happening again, is that the nature of this motion," said Noyes.

Ward 2 Coun. Rick Shular argued a solution needs to be reached, but asked if problems with algae are consistent throughout all of Greater Fort Erie's beaches and not just this particular one.

"Are we limited to this one area, or is this a common problem throughout?"

Ward 1 Coun. Sandy Annunziata raised the same question as Shular, asking if the report should include Waverly Beach is pretty much the only place we have this problem."

— Ron Tripp

consideration throughout the area. "Is Waverly Beach that unique, that it requires its own separate study?"

Director of infrastructure services Ron Tripp responded, saying Waverly Beach is in fact unique and requires attention on its own because of weather patterns and water levels in Lake Erie.

"Waverly Beach is pretty much the only place we have this problem," said Tripp.

To work toward a solution, the town staff investigated the possibility of making modifications to the shoreline or removal of the pier at the site when the final portion of the Friendship Trail was in the process of being built. It was determined that was not possible.

He said the town has an ongoing problem at the beach for a long time but this past summer, the problem with algae escalated to what it was before the Rotary Club and its team of volunteers cleaned it up over two weekends in August.

"We are still dealing with this every year, but it varies in its severity," said Tripp.

"This year was the worst," he added.

The town will consider a workable solution to keep the beach free from algae accumulation of this magnitude at budget time, creating a plan that will need to be endorsed by the ministry of natural resources.

Keep CBSA offices in Niagara, says Annunziata

Kris Dubé
The Times

If the Canadian Border Services (CBSA) intends to follow through with its plan to amalgamate offices, Ward 1 Coun. Sandy Annunziata feels Niagara should be an area that services are added to and not removed from.

In a communication item included in a recent council agenda, City of Clifton Hill Mayor of Town of Fort Erie said that it intends to close its inland office at 469 Central Avenue by April of next year. At this location, trade compliance services, delivered at this location will be moved to the Greater Toronto Area, it says in a communication presented to councillors and the mayor on Monday.

"This year was the worst," said Annunziata. "The town will consider a workable solution to keep the beach free from algae accumulation of this magnitude at budget time, creating a plan that will need to be endorsed by the ministry of natural resources.

There are four border crossings in the region and the Peace Bridge is the most heavily traveled crossing along the border, when it comes to automobile traffic.

"If there is going to be a centralization of efforts, you'd figure it would be in Niagara," he said.

Annunziata is worried that jobs will be lost or those who are offered to continue their employment at the CBSA at a different location, will be burdened with inconvenience and gas prices.

He said the motion's intent is to draw attention to this matter, hoping the CBSA will respond to his point.

"At the very least, give some thought to relocating those options here in Niagara."

CBSA spokesperson Esme Bailey said job losses are not anticipated and that the elimination of some positions is expected to be offset by attrition and the normal movement of employees within the public service.

Bailey noted that all government programs are reviewed on a regular cycle to ensure they are effective and efficient, while responding to the priorities of Canadians in line with core federal responsibilities.

"This ensures that funding is allocated to programs that are a high priority for Canadians and that these programs produce results," said Bailey.

It will eliminate duplications of efforts, minimize costs and maintain consistency, while improving service delivery through centres of expertise, according to the CBSA.

"Consolidating these southern Ontario operations will not by any means hinder the CBSA's ability to provide integrated border services, while upholding national security and public safety," said Bailey.

PUBLIC NOTICE

(1) OPEN HOUSE AND PUBLIC MEETING NOTICE - GATEWAY SECONDARY PLAN

PROPOSED CHANGE

On June 14, 2004, Town of Fort Erie Council approved in principle the Fort Erie International Gateway Urban Design Strategy, as a guide for the future planning and development of this important area of the Town, being the gateway not only into Fort Erie but also into Niagara Region, Ontario and the Niagara Region. The International Gateway Urban Design Strategy includes directions to move forward with the revitalization of the neighbourhood, including the transformation of the area, especially the Garrison Road Commercial Corridor into a choice area for future mixed residential and commercial development. Its strategic location on the international border helps position the Gateway Neighbourhood to take advantage of development opportunities in the Niagara Region and beyond. The International Gateway Urban Design Strategy's Smart Growth principles include the creation of compact walkable communities, reuse of existing municipal infrastructure, mix of land uses, cutting of urban sprawl, and fostering predictable and cost-effective development. In order to implement the proposed land-use changes recommended in the Gateway Urban Design Strategy, a Secondary Plan Amendment is necessary to amend the Official Plan. As a result, the proposed changes to the Secondary Plan Amendment will be consistent and in conformity with the Secondary Plan. Changes in land use designation and zoning designation are proposed for a number of properties in the Neighbourhood, many of which are located along the Garrison Road Commercial Corridor. Please refer to the Official Plan Map attached to this notice. Detailed information is available by viewing the following documents either in the Community and Development Services Department at Town Hall, or on the Town of Fort Erie website at www.forterie-on.ca.

Report says off-load ambulance days on the rise

Ray Spiteri
QMI Agency

The closure of emergency rooms in Fort Erie and Port Colborne has resulted in significant increases in ambulance off-load delays at Niagara's three remaining ERs.

That's according to a new report by Niagara Emergency Medical Services.

The delay to transfer patients from the care of paramedics to hospital staff has caused "significant strains" on the EMS system over the past several years, the report states.

"Paramedics are trained for quick intervention with patients and to treat them on scene and en route to the proper place to receive the care they need," Kevin Smith, associate director and deputy chief of EMS, told QMI Agency on Wednesday.

"They are not trained, necessarily, to provide long-term, ongoing care."

Ambulance off-load delay is the amount of time it takes once an ambulance is at the hospital for a patient to be transferred to ER staff. The longer paramedics remain at a hospital, the less time they have to respond to other calls in the community.

Ambulance off-load delays at Greater Niagara General, St. Catharines General and Welland County General hospitals have increased 68% from 2005, according to EMS figures.

The report, prepared by Smith, was presented to a Niagara Region Public Health and Social Services Committee.

It says during the first half of 2009, off-load delays decreased compared to 2008.

However, since the restructuring of hospital ERs later last year and the resulting increase in patient arrivals by ambulance to the three remaining ERs, "off-load delays have increased significantly and have now surpassed the previous peak of 7,075 unit hours set in 2008."

Paramedic service provided for 2010 is estimated at 10,000 unit hours in off-load time. This translates to an increase of 42% in EMS wait times over 2008 and a 68% increase over 2009."

To combat the problem, the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care announced in April it was spending close to $200,000 to hire one additional practical nurse at each of the ERs in Niagara Falls, St. Catharines and Welland to assist patients who arrive by ambulance.

The idea was for the nurses to help reduce the time paramedics spend with patients by providing care to less urgent patients who arrive by ambulance, allowing paramedics to respond to other calls in the community.

The report, however, said the budget "falls short of what was identified as being required to meet EMS and NHS needs."

"The 2010 funding...allows for the staffing of an off-load nurse eight hours a day, five days a week," the report said.

"The original proposal to the ministry recommended the staffing of an off-load nurse 12 hours a day, seven days a week, based on peak activity experienced in the (ER's)."

Complicating the matter,

the report notes, is the challenge of available hospital resources to make the province's off-load program effective.

"The lack of beds available for use by the off-load nurse to accept care of the EMS patient has hindered the effectiveness of this program, making the matter of funding a moot point until the bed situation improves."

Niagara Falls MPP Kim Crator said he had heard ambulance off-load delays are increasing and he's concerned about the situation.

"I don't disagree with anything they say in that report," he said, when contacted for comment.

Without sufficient beds to move patients into, the problem will not be resolved, he added.

"Unless they have enough beds, it isn't going to work."

Despite EMS' best efforts to support NHS initiatives and improve and develop processes, the ministry's inaction to address the issue, offload delays remains the "main challenge" facing the service.

"Off-load delays have a negative impact on front-line EMS staff, management, budgets and most importantly, patients," according to the report.

Paramedics have transitioned from providing street-level care to spending an increasing amount of their time performing "hallway care" as they often are required to provide ongoing patient support in the hospital setting for several hours after arrival prior to the transfer of patient.

In some recent instances, the transfer of a patient to hospital staff has taken four to six hours and in some cases, up to eight hours with the patient remaining on an EMS stretcher while they wait for an available hospital bed.

"In the worst perspective, in these circumstances one patient may consume the equivalent of one-half to two-thirds of one, 12-hour ambulance," notes the report. "Given the limited available resources due to offload delays, emergency medical dispatchers are continually challenged to ensure adequate regional coverage."

A swing for 'Macker'

Report 'no surprise' to NHS

Anne Atkinson, vice-president of patient services with the NHS, said NHS officials meet regularly with EMS staff to discuss off-load delay matters.

She said the report was "no surprise" to the NHS.

"In 2009, we made significant headway in decreasing [the delay], but in 2010 it started creeping back up," said Atkinson.

The health system is "aggressively" working with EMS to reverse the trend, she said.

When the Ets in Fort Erie and Port Colborne were converted to urgent care centres, the NHS and EMS developed a protocol to continue having patients brought to the Ets for treatment. The protocol has been in place for a year and Atkinson said they are prepared to reevaluate the guidelines to be more inclusive while maintaining patient safety.

"We are currently seeing more patients in Port and Fort. And while our volumes in the emergency departments in Welland and Niagara Falls have remained mostly stable, the patients coming in are presenting with a higher acuity."

Although the NHS will continue to work with stakeholders to try and improve off-load delay figures nostic testing and physician assessments. This causes an increase in the time a patient spends in the ER, which increases congestion, crowding and potential off-load delays.

Martin 'disappointed' about YouTube video

Kris Dubé
The Times

In February, a woman paid a visit to mayor Doug Martin in his office because she was apparently interested in moving to Fort Erie.

It seemed to be a regular meeting until he found out this week when a video appeared on the popular website YouTube that she had set up a hidden camera.

She asks him questions about Douglas Memorial Hospital and asks for clarification on whether it is closing or not.

He explains to her that the emergency room has been converted into an urgent care centre and that changes to health care are happening all over the province and not just in Fort Erie.

"I'm ignoring it, there's nothing there I haven't said in public," said Martin on Thursday.

Coincidentally, Martin will need to move out of his campaign headquarters on Garrison Road to make room for three physicians that will be setting up their practice at the location.

"We're working to attract doctors into the town and will continue to do so," he said.

He believes the woman's secretive mission that day in February is likely connected to someone who opposes a political decision made by the mayor.

"I'm disappointed the opposition would choose this type of tactic," he said.

Donations to COPE always needed

Local food bank always in need of support from community

Marc MacDonald
The Times

Barb Volzke of COPE wants residents of Fort Erie to know two things; the program is always in need of donations and that they are extremely thankful and appreciative of all of the donations they receive.

"We need the help and we need it to be ongoing," said Volzke. "We're so happy with what we do get keeping because people are very good to us otherwise we wouldn't be here, but we need it to keep coming."

Some of the items that are always in demand are things like peanut butter, tuna fish, pastas and sauces, canned fruits and vegetables, cereal, children's lunch snacks such as granola bars and juice boxes, and of course toiletries.

Volzke also noted that fresh food and produce is welcome as well, saying things like apples, milk and eggs go quick and they have the refrigerated storage to keep them cool in the meantime.

While the tendency seems to be that people donate during holidays, the rest of the years goes forgotten by many. For Volzke, she appreciates the programs supporters year round and encourages people to remember that holiday or not, people still need to eat.

People need to eat everyday, not just holidays."

—Barb Volzke

"There's a spike in the needs and the spike in things coming in," said Volzke. "I think it's human nature, you think of helping people over holidays, and I'm not knocking that, but people need to eat every day, not just holidays."

Community Outreach Program Erie (COPE) is in its 27th year and is open Monday-Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Friday 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

People living in Ridgeway, Crystal Beach and Stevensville can bring donations to the St. Vincent De Paul, located at St. George's Catholic Church in Ridgeway.

Building an opportunity for kids

Mason Homes to donate property that will benefit four Big Brothers Big Sisters agencies

Marc MacDonald
The Times

To wipe out a list that has 350 children on it is usually something organizations aim to avoid.

However, for Big Brothers Big Sisters (BBBS) in conjunction with Mason Homes, their goal will be exactly that - eliminate the waiting list of kids without a mentor - with roughly 45 kids here in Fort Erie.

In a very unique and

“The proceeds from the sale of the house are definitely going to help our agency with recruitment, but to work together with fellow low BBBS agencies.”

— Sondra Barrett

heartwarming show of charity, Mason Homes has donated a $130,000 property on Chioiry Cres in St. Catharines, and will donate all the proceeds from the sale of the home to four BBBS agencies - Greater Fort Erie, St. Catharines, Thorold, Grimsby, Lincoln, West Lincoln and South Niagara.

Sondra Barrett, the executive director of BBBS of Greater Fort Erie says that this is a great opportunity to help with recruitment, but to work together with fellow BBBS agencies.

“The proceeds from the sale of the house are definitely going to help our agency with recruitment and getting those kids off the waiting list and matched with a big brother or big sister,” said Barrett. “It’s also given us a chance as agencies to work together - we usually work in our communities and do our own work but this is a bigger project for all of us and we’re all working towards the same outcome.”

With hopes of fetching upwards of $300,000 for the completed home, there’s no doubt that the money split by each agency will greatly help in their efforts to make differences in the lives of young people.

While this is the first time a project like this is to be complete, Barrett hopes that it will set in motion an event that can become a regular occurrence, even if it’s every five years or so.

“We’re hoping that it sets the groundwork for the possibility of doing it every five years or something,” said Barrett. “It’s set the groundwork and it’s a good opportunity to look to in the future.”

The home, which is scheduled to be built between Sept. 24 and Oct. 3, is relying on donations of both time and materials, as well as the constant work of volunteers - something that Barrett says they can never have too many of.

“We’re going to have our own volunteers off the site but still doing registration and food preparation as well as cleanup on the job site,” she said. “We are still looking for volunteers for the build weekends.”

Should you wish to volunteer, you can reach Barrett at 905-871-8836 where all of the information can be passed along. You can also visit the Web site www.buildforkidssake.com.

Make Walking and Biking an ELECTION ISSUE

Find out where your local candidates stand on their commitment to design neighborhoods where you can walk or bike to many places. Research shows that most car trips are short trips that can easily be walked or biked if there is infrastructure in place such as sidewalks or bike lanes.

Being able to walk to school, work, stores, parks and restaurants is good for people, the environment and the economy. When people can walk more and rely on their cars less, communities become healthier and more vibrant places.

If you agree that this is important, here are three questions to ask candidates who are running for office.

- 1. What streets are the least safe and accessible to those aged 8 to 80 for walking and cycling? What would you do to make them safer and more accessible?
- 2. What infrastructure changes to support walking and cycling as forms of transportation are needed in your community?
- 3. In your role as Councillor / Mayor, how strongly would you prioritize principles of walkable and bikeable communities in the planning of new developments and changes to existing infrastructure?

For more information about the importance of designing communities that make it easier for people to walk and cycle, visit www.iCANwalk.ca.

Couple wants to raise awareness about spider bite

Brown recluse spider puts man in coma for two weeks and requires him to have nine surgeries

Kris Dubé
The Times

It seemed like a harmless game of hide and seek in the backyard...but days later one of the participants was hanging onto dear life in the hospital.

In August, Cheryl Burnham and her boyfriend Omar Bailey joined some friends at a backyard on Parkdale Avenue in Crescent Park. There were about a half dozen children there, so naturally some fun and games ensued.

Everyone at the gathering decided a contest of "man-eaten" or a form of hide-and-seek, would be a great way to spend the afternoon. When Bailey hid behind a shed in the backyard, he felt something bite his leg.

He brushed himself off and didn't think too much about it.

Days later, he suffered from an extremely high fever and his girlfriend Cheryl immediately took him to the Miller Fillmore Hospital in Buffalo, considering he is a U.S. resident.

"He was dripping with sweat, that's how bad the fever was," said Burnham. Cheryl immediately contacted him and he eventually spent two weeks in a coma after what Burnham says doctors explained to be the result of a bite from a brown recluse spider. The small insect laid eggs inside him and had endured nine surgeries to remove the eggs and anything else the dangerous critter left behind.

Bailey was able to overcome the ordeal and is no longer in the hospital but both he and Cheryl want the community to take extra precaution when spending time in the outdoors. Considering there were several small children at the backyard gathering that day, they are thankful it wasn't one of them that had to go through this near-death experience.

Without any of the children, they wouldn't have survived this, said Burnham recently.

"This is really serious, people need to know these things are around here," she added.

At one point, doctors told the couple Bailey would need to have his leg amputated, because of the deep cut the bite caused around most of his hip. He is currently going through rehabilitation and on track to getting his life back to normal.

"People really need to know these things are around," he said.

Calls to the ministry of natural resources on this species were not returned.

Meteors drop first two games of season

Home opener a tough 10-2 loss to St. Catharines, second game against Thorold closer in score

Kris Dubé and Marc MacDonald Times Staff

The Fort Erie Meteors have dropped their first two games of the regular season, but they know what it is that needs to be improved on.

Opening the year on Saturday night at home against the top team in the golden horseshoe league from last season, the Meteors suffered a brutal 10-2 loss at the Lesseureplex against the St. Catharines Falcons.

After the opening frame, the Meteors found themselves heading to the dressing room only down by a score of 2-0, but the second period, St. Catharines opened the floodgates and scored five more goals, making it 7-0 heading into the third period.

"They had the momentum after the first period and they kept coming at us," said general manager Tony Passero.

"If we would have scored first, it would have been an entirely different game."

One order of business that needs to be improved is the Meteors' defensive game, as Passero said it is something he and the rest of the coaching staff were not satisfied with after the first game.

"It's definitely something we have to work on,"

said Passero.

Considering the Falcons captained the times they were on the powerplay, Passero said the players need to control themselves and try to draw penalties, rather than take them.

"We have to stay out of the box, especially against the top teams."

In the third period, the scoring was 3-2 in favour of the Falcons, which Passero says is a sign that the Meteors can keep up with the league's more feared teams... but it needs to be consistent throughout all sixty minutes.

It could have been a little different, but it's tough when you open against the team that won the championship last year," he said.

On Wednesday, the Meteors were on the road against the Thorold Knights and narrowly lost by a score of 4-3. The Knights were up a step behind in the first period, giving up a pair of goals and getting outshot 12-6 - something that head coach Clint Strachan attributes to losing sight of their game plan.

"In the first period we didn't execute the game plan," said Strachan. "We weren't strong on the forecheck and we were letting them come out of their zone nice and easy and after the first period we sat down and went over our game plan again and we were practicing the puck movement in the zone, on and third and it got us back into the hockey game."

Get them back into the hockey game it did, as the Meteors, while being outshot 16-10, managed a pair of goals - one from Connor Carroll and one from Tyler Newsome - to tie the game at three.

"I think they started to buy into the system that the coaching staff is putting in front of them," said Strachan. "I think everybody probably noticed that they started to play as a team as the game went on."

The Knights had a lot of room to move and that's just their strength, to buy into the new system," said Strachan.

was decided by special teams, with the Meteors making a power play and Strachan and Thorold scoring twice with the man advantage - which proved to be the difference in the hockey game.

"They like overload down low on us," said Strachan on how Thorold was able to score three times with the man advantage. "We didn't seem to make the right adjustments and a couple times we got burnt down low - good powerplays always beat good penalty kills, and for the most part we did a good job of keeping the shots coming from the outside. We did get a lot of insight opportunities we got ourselves into some penalty trouble and it cost us."

Despite only being a pair of games into the season, the Meteors new coach has already picked one particular game in which to sound off on his coaching style.

"We're definitely going to be working on our defensive zone coverage," said Strachan.
